Primary Care Guidance: Children and Young People Who Are Not Brought To Healthcare Appointments
Introduction

Missing appointments for some children may be an indicator that they are at an increased risk of abuse. There are many innocent reasons why children miss appointments but numerous studies have shown that missing healthcare appointments is a feature in many serious case reviews including those into child deaths\textsuperscript{1,2}.

Within Health there is now a move towards the concept of Was Not Brought (WNB) rather than Did Not Attend (DNA) for children and young people. It is rarely the child’s fault that they miss appointments. The National Service Framework for Children (2004)\textsuperscript{3} states that: Children or young people failing to attend clinic appointments “may trigger concern, given that they are reliant on their parent or carer to take them to the appointment. Failure to attend can be indicator of a family’s vulnerability, potentially placing the child’s welfare in jeopardy”. Not addressing missed appointments may disadvantage the child involved.

All Health Boards and Trusts have DNA or WNB policies that include informing Primary Care.

Many children are also not brought to appointments in Primary and Community healthcare.

CEMACH in their 2008 report into Serious Case Reviews\textsuperscript{2} noted how frequently children who died had previously been identified as recurrent non-attendees, including hospital and community appointments. They also commented on the deleterious consequences for children who had failed to attend out-patient appointments on one or more occasions and were not followed up.

Recommendations from CEMACH include:

- Health Services, including Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services should proactively follow up children who do not attend appointments.
- When a child or young person doesn’t attend an appointment with any health service, they should be contacted and the appointment should be rearranged.
- Children with chronic illnesses who do not attend hospital appointments should be followed up in primary care to discuss reasons for non-attendance.

The CQC review of safeguarding children arrangements in the NHS, July 2009\textsuperscript{4}, identified that there should be a process in place for following up children who fail to attend appointments.
The RCGP/NSPCC Toolkit makes the recommendations that practices have in place:

- Procedures for identifying and following children who do not attend scheduled appointments within the Practice or with other Agencies such as therapies, secondary or community care;

- Procedures to identify and follow up children with more than expected unscheduled appointments at the Practice, OOHs, A & E Departments, Walk-in Centres;

It should be remembered that parents have the right to make decisions in respect of their child’s health. The concept of Parental Responsibility gives a legal definition to the rights and responsibilities of a person with parental responsibility. Parental responsibility allows a parent or carer to accept or decline a health service or treatment on behalf of their child. However if by declining a health service or treatment this may be detrimental to the child or young person’s health, growth or development, an assessment should be made of the risk this poses to the child or young person.

The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child recognises the right of the child to enjoy the highest attainable standard of health and to facilities for the treatment of illness and rehabilitation of health. It requires that organisations strive to ensure that no child is deprived of his or her right of access to such health care services.

It is therefore important that Primary Care has processes in place to deal with children and young people who are not brought to appointments both in Secondary and Primary care.
Guidance

Children not attending appointments with other Health Professionals

Health Board Was Not Brought/Did Not Attend policies state that when children miss appointments the referring clinician is notified. It is recognised that missing appointments can be an indicator of neglect. In Primary Care there should be a process in place to:

- Identify WNB/DNA notifications for children.
- Review the reason for referral and assess if any further action is required to manage the clinical problem that prompted the referral.
- Note if there have been any other episodes of missing appointments in any setting including Primary Care.
- Consider whether there are any safeguarding concerns and if there are take any appropriate action.
- Consider contacting the family about children not being brought for appointments especially if there are multiple instances.
- Document this process including any subsequent actions taken as a result.
Guidance

Children not attending appointments in Primary Care

It is clear that a lot of missed appointments in Primary Care are due to the transient nature of many conditions and do not give rise to concerns. However if we do not have a process in place we cannot recognise when vulnerable children are not brought or there are multiple missed appointments.

Therefore Primary Care Practices need to have a Was Not Brought policy for children that should include:

- Identifying when children are not brought for appointments
- If the appointment is known to be as a consequence of a referral/recommendation of other Healthcare Professionals, notifying them of the failure to attend
- If the reason for the appointment is known, consideration as to whether there are any clinical consequences and if any actions are required.
- Consideration of any safeguarding concerns, especially when there are multiple episodes of WNB in Primary Care or other settings.
- Appropriate action if there are clinical or safeguarding concerns.
- Consideration of contacting the family about children not being brought for appointments especially if there are multiple instances.
- Documenting this process including any actions taken as a result.
